SELECTED GRANTS/PROJECTS

Toward an Agenda for Policy-Relevant Research on Reducing Community Violence. Principal Investigator. This short-term, collaborative project will identify priority research questions of interest across the community violence literature, evaluate the level of rigor of research in the literature, assess the quality and impact of research results, and develop issue areas that need further research. Summer 2021. Sponsored by Arnold Ventures.

Modern Methods to Cost Crime Victimization: Statistical Modelling with Integrated and Survey Data to Comprehensively Measure Harm. Co-Principal Investigator (PI John Roman, NORC). This project will develop a conceptual model of victimization costs that redefines key constructs in measuring harms from violence and uses those constructs to create a new methodology for financial cost modeling of victimization. To develop and test the model we are obtaining and analyzing innovative integrated data systems (IDS) that link criminal justice, health, labor, and human services data in three counties and conducting an in-person household-based random survey sample of males in Cook and Camden counties to: 1) observe the prevalence of victim harms in trauma, quality of life, and repeat victimization and 2) examine the use of very under-studied victim services. January 2021 through December 2022. Sponsored by the National Institute of Justice ($1,226,000)

Gun-Violence and Desistance: The Role of Mentoring and Social Relations among Early Desisters. Dr. Roman's post-doc mentee, Dr. Peter Simonsson, was awarded this post-doc fellowship in spring 2021 by the National Collaborative on Gun Violence Research (NCGVR), a collaborative funded by Arnold Ventures. Using multi-method qualitative inquiry, this project will explore, within the framework of the Cure Violence Public Health Model, how high-risk young people in the early stages of desistance engage with Cure Violence outreach workers and utilize mentoring and support. The project will also examine how the Cure Violence outreach workers make sense of their own "street" background in the context of mentoring young people at risk for gun violence.

Beyond Gun Violence Reduction. Principal Investigator. This project, in collaboration with the Philadelphia District Attorney's Office, extends Dr. Roman's evaluation research on Philadelphia CeaseFire/Cure Violence and Philadelphia Focused Deterrence to examine whether the interventions differentially influenced clearance rates for shootings. The project will also assess what types of deterrence processes were at work with Focused Deterrence. 2021-2023. Sponsored by the Fund for a Safer Future. ($200,000)

Reducing Violence without Police: A Review of Research Evidence (Consultant to John Jay Research and Evaluation Center; Dr. Jeffrey Butts, PI). This Arnold Ventures funded project was designed to review and summarize available research evidence for policies and programs that may help to reduce community violence without relying on police. A diverse group of academic experts across various fields came together to answer the question: How can communities ensure the health and security of their residents without depending on law enforcement? Fall 2020. Final product: <https://johnjayrec.nyc/wp-content/uploads/2020/11/AV20201109.pdf>

Implementing and Evaluating the Violent Crime and Opioid Reduction Partnership (VCORP). Principal Investigator on subcontract with the PA Office of the Attorney General. This collaborative project led by the Pennsylvania Office of Attorney General (OAG) (lead agency) expands and evaluates an innovative prosecution strategy, known as the Violent Crime and Opioid Reduction Partnership (VCORP). VCORP is designed to reduce violent crime tied to drug markets, but with specific emphasis on collaborative analysis-driven targeting, investigation and smart prosecution of crime drivers. The Temple research team is developing a detailed set of performance measures and conducting an impact evaluation. October 2019 through December 2021. Sponsored by the U.S. Bureau of Justice Assistance (Temple subcontract: $196,000).

Innovations in Supervision Initiative: Community Corrections Collaborations to Reduce Violent Crime and Recidivism. Principal Investigator on subcontract with PADO. This project is designed to develop a research-practitioner partnership that will work closely with the PA Department of Corrections and State Parole to assist in developing new methods of data collection and analyses for Philadelphia's Project Safe Neighborhoods, a focused deterrence initiative targeting violent offenders leaving state prisons. November 2019 through October 2021. Sponsored by Council of State Governments and the U.S. Bureau of Justice Assistance ($133,000).

Enhancing Healthy Reintegration and Recovery for High-Risk Opioid Users. Co-Investigator (Steven Belenko, PI). The project is testing a new intervention to link people with opioid use disorders returning to Philadelphia from prison or jail to comprehensive treatment services at Temple University Health System. The project also involves a training a diversity training component in collaboration with Lincoln University. Sponsored by the PA Department of Health, with funding from the PA Commonwealth Universal Research Enhancement Program (CURE). January 2020 through December 2023.

Performance Measurement Support and Evaluation of the Phila District Attorney Office's Crisis Assistance, Response, & Engagement for Survivors Strategy (CARES) Strategy. Principal Investigator. This grant creates a research-practitioner partnership designed to provide data collection and reporting support to an innovative program designed to provide survivors of homicide victims comprehensive support. The research team also will design an outcome monitoring strategy and develop protocols for measurement of activities and outcomes. 2019 to 2021. Sponsored by the PA Commission on Crime and Delinquency ($181,000).

The Victim-Offender Overlap: Examining Police and Service System Networks of Response among Violent Conflicts. Principal Investigator. This project examines how police and victim service system networks respond after violent street conflicts, and collects qualitative and quantitative data to assess whether victims with offense/arrest histories are treated differently from victims who are not labeled as offenders. 2017 to 2019. Sponsored by the National Institute of Justice (NIJ) and Office for Victims of Crime ($579,000).

Measuring Success in Focused Deterrence through an Effective Researcher-Practitioner Partnership. Principal Investigator. The project supported the creation and maintenance of an effective, long term, sustainable research partnership that facilitated an overall research and evaluation approach utilizing joint strategy planning and development around focused deterrence law enforcement practices in the city of Philadelphia. 2014-2018. Sponsored by NIJ. ($298,265)

CRIME-PA: Crime Model Evaluation for Physical Activity. Subcontract Principal Investigator. The study evaluates a trans-disciplinary conceptual model of the relation of crime and crime-related perceptions to physical activity and other cardiovascular disease-related outcomes across the life span. Research activities included development of reliable measures of crime-related constructs that will be applicable across the life span. 2013 to 2018. Sponsored by the National Heart, Lung and Blood Institute, NIH. Prime Award # 1R01HL117884-02 (Subcontract: $199,000).

Debt and Prisoner Reentry: Examining the Influences of Prisoners' Legal and Financial Obligations on Reentry. Principal Investigator. The study used secondary data from SVORI to assess the relationship between prisoner debt, child support, employment and successful community reintegration. 2013 to 2014. Sponsored by the NIJ. ($40,000)

City of Philadelphia Youth Violence Prevention Resource and Gap Analysis. Principal Investigator. This DHS-funded research grant supported the development of a data-driven multi-agency collaborative strategy to reduce homicides and shootings in Philadelphia. 2013 to 2014. ($182,000)

Implementation Study of Cure Violence/CeaseFire - A Pilot Grant. Co-Principal Investigator. This study examined how model fidelity can be measured when evaluating the well-known, evidenced-based intervention of Cure Violence. The pilot grant assessed whether cities such as Philadelphia would have neighborhoods that could support a rigorous evaluation of Cure Violence. 2013. Sponsored by the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation. ($50,000)

Gangs, Social Networks and Geography: Understanding the Factors Associated with Gang Desistance. Principal Investigator. (RAND - fiscal agent). This study, involving collaboration between Temple University, RAND, and the Urban Institute, will examine the factors that influence gang desistance. The research team employed social network methods to study gang youth in the Philadelphia and the District of Columbia. Sponsored by the Office of Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention (OJJDP). 2012-2016. ($990,000)

National Evaluation of the Community-Based Violence Prevention Program. Co-Principal Investigator. This study involved a comprehensive process and outcome evaluation of OJJDP's $8.6 million Community-Based Violence Prevention Demonstration Program (CBVP). The CBVP demonstration program replicated practices associated with some of the most effective recent innovations in violent crime prevention and control, such as Cure Violence and Focused Deterrence. Sponsored by OJJDP. 2010 to 2014. ($1,000,000)

Assessing Systems Change within the National Forum on Youth Violence Prevention. Co-Principal Investigator. Temple University worked in partnership with John Jay College of Criminal Justice to conduct a six-city assessment of the development and implementation of youth violence prevention and intervention strategies arising from the National Forum on Youth Violence Prevention. The National Forum was a White House initiative designed to facilitate the development of comprehensive city-wide strategies to reduce youth violence. Sponsored by OJJDP. 2010 to 2012. ($375,000)

Norms and Networks of Latino Youth. Principal Investigator. The project examined the composition of Latino youth friendship and peer networks to derive the structural properties that influence the commission of crime. Through social network data collection and analysis, the study assessed both individual and group dynamics contributing to criminal behavior and group-related activity among Latino youth and young adults. Sponsored by OJJDP. 2007 to 2011. ($600,000)

Salud America: The Effects of Crime on Physical Activity and Outdoor Recreation among Latino Adolescents. Consultant. The study employed an ecological framework to examine how fear of crime, level of crime victimization, and perceived community disorder affect physical activity and outdoor recreation among Latino children of various acculturation levels and whether physical activity levels have any effects on involvement in crime. Sponsored by the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation. 2009 to 2011. ($200,000)

Evaluation of the Corporation for Supportive Housing's Returning Home Initiative – Chicago. Principal Investigator. This project employed a randomized design to test the hypothesis that homeless frequent users of jail who are provided supportive housing will be less likely to recidivate and use homeless shelters than a control group. NIJ and various sponsors. 2007 to 2012. ($400,000)

Best Practices for the District of Columbia's Focused Improvement Areas. Co-Principal Investigator. This project sought to develop guidelines and performance measures for a DC mayoral initiative targeted to reduce violence crime and provide services to high-risk families across 5 neighborhoods. D.C. Mayor's Office. 2010. ($15,000)

The Hard to House Demonstration Project. Co-Principal Investigator through 2008 move to Temple. Researchers evaluated a pilot project that provided enhanced case management services to residents of two Chicago public housing developments to determine whether the demonstration improved housing outcomes, reduced crime and substance abuse, and improved overall quality of life. Sponsored by the MacArthur Foundation, the Annie E. Casey Foundation, and the Rockefeller Foundation. 2006 to 2010. ($1,000,000)

Community Organizations and Crime: An Examination of the Social-Institutional Processes of Neighborhoods. Principal Investigator. The study examined how local organizations are linked to social control and crime in order to inform policy, research and practice around community development for crime control and public safety. The goal was to define an innovative new measure of neighborhood organizational capacity based on survey measures of the capacity of community-based institutions. Sponsored by NIJ. 2005 to 2009. ($200,000)

Evaluation of the Ridge House Residential Program. Co-Principal Investigator. The Ridge House is a faith-based transitional housing program operating in Reno, Nevada, that provides prisoner reentry services to men and women leaving prison. The evaluation assessed the impacts of the program with regard to reducing recidivism. Sponsored by NIJ. 2004 to 2009. ($750,000)

Alcohol Availability and Crime. Principal Investigator. The main goal of the study was to examine the relationship between alcohol availability, distribution policies and alcohol-related injury, homicide, assault, and disorder. The project was based on the development of a geographic information system (GIS) containing neighborhood crime and health indicators and demographic and locational characteristics for Washington, D.C. Sponsored by NIJ. 2006 to 2008. ($100,000)

Strategic Planning for and Evaluation of DC Project Safe Neighborhoods. Principal Investigator. The research team partnered with numerous local DC and federal law enforcement agencies to assist in strategic planning efforts to reduce gun crime. Analyses of violent crime and gang data were used to guide the development of a focused deterrence strategy to reduce gun violence. Sponsored by the Bureau of Justice Assistance (BJA). 2003 to 2007. ($225,000)

The Housing Landscape for Returning Prisoners in DC. Principal Investigator. This study documented the geographic concentrations of returning prisoners; developed an assessment of housing capacity in neighborhoods where offenders are returning; and explored the programs and services available to assist returning citizens in their transition back to the community. Sponsored by the Fannie Mae Foundation, 2003 to 2006. ($50,000)

Evidence-based Housing Programs for Persons with Mental Illness Returning from Prisons and Jails. Principal Investigator. This study involved developing a paper identifying evidence-based housing models used for persons with mental illness who have had contact with the justice system. Sponsored by the National GAINS Center. 2005. ($10,000)

Weed and Seed Strategies: Understanding the Spatial and Temporal Displacement of Crime. Principal Investigator. The goal of this study was to develop and apply a replicable methodology for assessing the displacement effects of interventions undertaken by law enforcement agencies in Weed and Seed sites in South Florida. Sponsored by the Executive Office of Weed and Seed/Community Capacity Development Office. 2003 to 2005. ($200,000)

National Evaluation of the SafeFutures Program. Project Team Member. This project was a multi-year national, cross-site evaluation of OJJDP's SafeFutures partnerships to reduce youth crime and victimization. 1995 to 2005.

Understanding Community Justice Partnerships. Principal Investigator. This study developed and validated a conceptual framework for measuring and assessing community-based crime prevention partnerships. The final report developed performance measures, identified useful data sets and tools for monitoring and evaluating partnership development, implementation and outcomes. Sponsored by NIJ. 2002 to 2005. ($125,000)

Housing, Homelessness and Reentry: A National Focus. Principal Investigator. This Fannie Mae Foundation-sponsored project was conducted to bring research and practice to bear on the priority issues for promoting a sensible agenda for communities, states and the nation with regard to overcoming the barriers to safe and affordable housing that individuals face upon release from prison or jail. Roundtable held October, 2003. ($70,000)

The Role of Community Institutional Capacity in Social Capital. Principal Investigator. The study developed and validated a strategy for measuring community institutional capacity and its role as a key component of social capital. Sponsored by the Aspen Roundtable on Comprehensive Community Initiatives, 2002 to 2003. ($200,000)

Community Assessment of the Neighborhood Transformation Initiative. Principal Investigator.

This study involved the conduct of a community assessment in the 72-block neighborhood of Sandtown-Winchester in Baltimore to gauge changes in the well-being of the community in relation to a number of more recent revitalization efforts funded by the Kellogg Foundation. 2002. ($50,000)

Victimization In and Around Schools. Principal Investigator. This project examined the relationship among indicators of social disorganization, community institutions and levels of violent crime. Sponsored by OJJDP. 1999 to 2002. ($43,000)

Evaluation of the Prince George's County Curfew Law. Principal Investigator. An interrupted time series analysis design was used to determine the impact of the county's law on victimization, arrests and calls for service. Sponsored by NIJ. 1999 to 2000. ($100,000)

Violence in the District of Columbia. Co-Principal Investigator. This project included an analysis of patterns of violent crime and the development of a series of presentations to inform efforts to reduce violence in DC. Sponsored by the Criminal Justice Coordinating Council. 2000 to 2001. ($200,000)

Evaluation of Opportunity to Succeed Program. Project Manager. Opportunity to Succeed (OPTS) offered a program of community-based aftercare services (including drug treatment, counseling, skills building in family relationships, employability, and other pro-social domains; health and mental health) for substance-abusing ex-offenders. The research study encompassed process, impact, and cost-benefit analyses of demonstrations in three sites. Sponsored by the NIJ and the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation. 1994 to 1999.
