Eta Sigma Phi Classics Honor Society

If you are a student of Latin and Greek and have a B or better average in one semester or more of the language, you are invited to apply for membership in the national Classics honor society, Eta Sigma Phi. This honorary promotes the study of and interest in Classical languages, literatures and cultures, and offers fellowships and competitive activities to friends of the ancient world. After this application is turned in, you will be officially inducted at the next Temple Classics event.

Each year the society holds a convention at the university of a host chapter. Zeta Beta chapter of Temple University, which could become your chapter, held this event in years past. The convention has also been held in San Diego, CA, Norman, OK, and New Orleans.

Eta Sigma Phi holds translation contests, and sponsors student papers to be read at the ESP convention or at the southern section meeting (Autumn) of the Classical Association of the Atlantic States (CAAS). The Society offers competitive summer fellowships for travel and study abroad.

There is a forty-dollar initiation fee which is a one-time fee for lifetime membership. There is also a one-time, twenty-dollar chapter fee. The Temple University Classics Department will pay this fee on behalf of new members.

Zeta Beta chapter of Temple typically holds events during spring and fall semesters. Due to Covid-19, Zeta Beta chapter will be transitioning to service projects and activities through an online format.
