A CLOSE-KNIT COMMUNITY

One of the advantages of studying German at Temple is that the program is small and gemütlich (cozy). Students have close contact with faculty members and classmates. The student-run Temple University German Society (TUGS) also maintains ties with the local community and regularly participates in events with the German Society of Pennsylvania. Whether you are studying in Philadelphia or abroad in Hamburg, Tübingen, Leipzig, or Berlin, our goal is to help you develop your full potential in German both on a personal level and in terms of your career path.

WORDLY CAREERS

Speaking more than one language can set you apart in today’s global job market. It may increase your marketability and opportunities for career advancement and promotion. Multilingual professionals can communicate with a larger population and help increase an employer’s competitive edge.

Additionally, studying a language and its culture can help you develop empathy and global thinking. It can broaden your perspective and help you cultivate a greater understanding of people and, in turn, the world. The critical skills gained from learning a foreign language are directly applicable to today’s rapidly diversifying world and can be used across all fields and disciplines, including the arts, business, education, business, software development, digital media, communication technology, government service, healthcare, international law, journalism, military, nonprofits, public relations, the sciences, translation, and travel and tourism.

IMMERSIVE EXPERIENCES

German majors strongly encouraged to study abroad and have many options when it comes to studying in Germany. These include a semester or year-long exchange program at the universities of Hamburg and Tübingen, the summer intensive German program in Leipzig and the summer program in Berlin at the Freie Universität Berlin: International Summer and Winter University (FUBiS).
At the College of Liberal Arts (CLA), students have access to more than just great classes. Our urban setting provides countless experiential learning opportunities outside the classroom like internships, research endeavors with faculty and community engagement. These experiences empower our students to continue developing their skill sets, pursuing their interests and growing into tomorrow’s leaders in challenging and rewarding career paths.

INTERNSHIPS

Internships impart valuable skills that are extensions of those taught in the classroom. CLA is committed to enhancing students’ professionalism and assisting them in obtaining internships. Visit the Joyce K. Salzberg Center for Professional Development for internship resources dedicated solely to liberal arts students.

COMMUNITY-ENGAGED LEARNING

Community-engaged Learning (CEL) is a collaboration between students, faculty and community stakeholders to address a community-identified need.

RESEARCH OPPORTUNITIES

Undergraduate research opportunities at CLA range from developing an independent project to partnering with a faculty member or working with a university lab or group.

STUDY ABROAD

Studying abroad can be one of the most transformative experiences you’ll have as a college student. Temple University students have many opportunities to study abroad through our international campuses in Rome and Japan, foreign exchange programs and external partnerships.
